

Influence of Style of Parenting and Socioeconomic Status on Noble Character

Keywords: Style of Parenting, Socioeconomic Status, Noble Character

Establishing a noble character is one of the goals of Indonesia's national education. The factors that shape a noble character become an important agenda of the study. This study, therefore, aims to determine the disparity of noble attitudes based on socioeconomic statuses and parenting patterns between girls of madrasah tsanawiyah in the Islamic boarding schools and those girls in the Islamic boarding school (pesantren).

Data were collected from student questionnaires. This study uses the ex-post facto method with a 2x2 factorial design.

The results of the study found that there are differences in noble characters based on the patterns of parenting. There are differences in noble characters based on the patterns of parenting between girl students who live in Islamic boarding schools and those who do not live in Islamic boarding schools. Also, there is no difference between students with low and high socioeconomic statuses. There is no interaction between the influence of parenting and socioeconomic status on noble characters.
